As soon as the ceremonies are over Taft will return south.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—After more than a century of agitation by individuals and organizations, bones representing approximately 15,000 "martyrs" of the Revolutionary war, who died on the prison ship "Jersey," and other lesser vessels in Wallabout Bay, Brooklyn, lie at last in a fittingly marked burial place, for which the Government, New York State and hundreds of individuals made contributions. An imposing pile of granite, 270 feet high, surrounded by a funeral urn and flag staff, rises above the tomb at Fort Greene Park, Brooklyn, and its dedication today is marked by a remarkable military parade of nearly 20,000 soldiers and marines, and temporary addresses by President-Elect William H. Taft and Governor Charles E. Hughes.

The procession of naval and military organizations, said to be one of the largest in the history of Brooklyn, the tremendous outpouring of people from all over Greater New York, crowding densely the line of march, and at Fort Greene Park massed by tens of thousands, presented an in-

CABINET PLACE

Could Be Well Filled by Any One of a Number of West Virginians.

The Washington Post says: "The election of Glasscock as governor of West Virginia was in no sense a surprise to me," said S. V. Matthews, chairman of the Republican state committee of West Virginia, at the Willard. "Even when some Republicans appeared doubtful about his election some hours following the closing of the polls, I did not waver in my confidence, because I knew just where we would roll up majorities to offset the Democratic vote in other sections, and when the returns came in they showed we were right in our estimates. West Virginia is a safe Republican state, and when we adjusted our factional differences, albeit we had only a few weeks to make a campaign, it was all over but the shouting and a little hard work, for West Virginia Republicans can be depended upon to work when the pinch comes."

"There is every indication that Taft's election will mean the immediate return of the general prosperity we have enjoyed ever since the Republican party was returned to power. Business in West Virginia is showing a marked revival and a healthy tone. I do not know that West Virginia will have a member of the cabinet. We have ample material, however, and if President-elect Taft desires to choose a man from our state we can provide a great array of first-class men for him to make a selection from."

DEMOCRACY TO QUIT

Future Campaign Battles Are to Be Between Republicans and Prohibitionists

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 14.—(Special.) Now that the various party managers have figured out how badly Bryan was beaten by Taft, they are turning their attention to the analysis of the vote and the platform. One of the most interesting features in this connection is the statement of Eugene V. Chaffin, Prohibition candidate for President, who, at the Washington Home the other night, said that the Prohibition movement was knocked out at the recent election. Mr. Chaffin says:

"With the aid of the liquor business the Republicans carried New York City, Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Every temperance candidate of prominence on both sides was knocked out at the recent election. There are many thousands of voters in both parties who are ready to come with us just as soon as they are convinced that whiskey dominates the present elections. We are sure to win."

That the Prohibition movement made no headway as Mr. Chaffin intimates is borne out by the analysis of the votes in the various states. The storm center of the Prohibitionists' fight in the election was in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, South Dakota, Rhode Island, Minnesota, and Tennessee. In seven of these states the Prohibitionists were defeated and a number of well-known candidates who championed their cause failed in election.

Probably the hottest contest over the Prohibition question was in Indiana, because of its pivotal character in the national election. Gov. J. F. Hanley, Republican, is a well-known Prohibition advocate and secured control of the Republican state convention. He secured a county option plank in the platform. The Democratic party platform advocated village and township option. Gov. Hanley, however, was not satisfied and as the campaign progressed called a special session of the legislature which was Republican, and procured the passage of a county option law. At the same time he was assisted by the Republican nominee for Governor, James Watson, and United States Senator Hemenway. The action of the Governor caused much criticism and in the campaign County option became the issue. The state went Republican by 10,000 plurality, but the Republican candidate for Governor, Watson, was defeated by Marshall, Democrat, by over 18,000, while the Republicans also lost the legislature, which will elect a Democratic United States Senator to succeed Senator Hemenway. Gov. Hanley's associate in the county option fight.

In Ohio, the birthplace of the Anti-Saloon league, the lines between the Prohibitionists and the Liberals were sharply drawn. The Anti-Saloon element championed the cause of Gov. Harris, candidate for re-election. Harris had been prominent during his administration as an advocate of Prohibition and had obtained the passage of the Rose county option law by the legislature. In the campaign, he was opposed to Jackson Harmon, the Democratic candidate, who was supported by the more liberal voters of the state. The result was that Ohio gave Taft 65,000 plurality, but in spite of this sweeping Republican victory the Anti-Saloon candidate on a Prohibition platform went down in defeat and his Democratic opponent was elected by over 20,000. State Senators Rose, Siles, Meek and Drake, who were lieutenants of Harris in his Anti-Saloon campaign, also were defeated. Rose was the father of the county option law and Drake the chairman of the committee of the legislature having charge of all temperance legislation.

In Illinois the Anti-Saloon people centered their fight in an effort to secure the legislature for county option. Returns show that they were overwhelmingly defeated, 75 per cent of the members elected to the senate and house being opposed to county option. The leader of the local option forces in the last legislature, O. F. Herlihy, was defeated.

In South Dakota the question of county option was squarely presented to the people of the entire state under the initiative and referendum. The Prohibitionists and the Anti-Saloon league and joint headquarters, made a vigorous fight. County option was defeated by 7,000. The defeat of the question is more decisive in South Dakota because it is a purely agricultural state and in recent years had experienced in state Prohibition.

The Anti-Saloon league selected Rhode Island as a point in which to test its strength in New England. Two weeks before the election under a decision of the Supreme Court, it became necessary for the state as a whole to vote on the question of license or no license. A short but lively campaign followed and resulted in the voters retaining all the towns and cities they had and retaining seven more towns that had previously gone dry. The aggregate majority of the towns favoring license was 20,000 or more.

The verdict of the voters of Tennessee who in the June primaries voted against state wide prohibition, was sustained in the November election. At the primaries Gov. M. R. Patterson, Democrat, opposed E. S. Carmack, editor of the Tennesseean of Nashville. Carmack favored state prohibition and after his defeat bolted the primary election and the platform and continued his fight for state wide prohibition. Patterson was re-elected by 35,000, running 10,000 ahead of the national ticket. A majority of the legislature is opposed to state wide prohibition and will stand by Gov. Patterson's policies. The main issue in the election of a legislature in Minnesota was county option. The fight was carried on in nearly every district and as the contest progressed Candidate Jacobson, Republican nominee for Governor, came out accurately for county option. He all three states the saloon in general. The result was that while Taft carried the state by 75,000, Jacobson, the Democratic candidate for Governor, was re-elected for a third term by over 30,000 and the legislature is 2 to 1 against any county option.

CROWDS MUTTER AROUND THE JAIL

Where Man Who Tried to Slay Heney in Court Room is Now Imprisoned.

REUE IS IN JAIL TOO As a Matter of Safety Against Renewed Violence from Maddened People.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Nov. 14.—Frederick J. Heney, who was shot in the court room yesterday by Morris Haas, retained consciousness throughout the night and rested well. No alarming symptoms had developed this morning and his condition is said to be improved. His physicians state he has a good chance to recover.

Never was the city more stirred than by the attempted assassination of Heney. News of the shooting spread like wildfire and people in every walk of life hurried to swell the crowds in the downtown district. Haas was last night confined in the county jail.

There was no attempt at a demonstration, but muttering crowds gathered about the city prison and court room where Heney was shot. Thirty policemen, armed with rifles, guarded the approaches to the jail during the night.

Abraham Ruef was remanded into custody by Judge Lawler immediately after the shooting and is also a temporary prisoner in the jail having been locked up in fear that he might be made a victim of renewed violence from an excited and unexpected quarter.

Haas declared no one except himself knew of his determination to slay Heney.

Heney is a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in this city, and Haas is a Jewish saloon keeper, who has been accepted as a juror in a previous trial and afterwards removed, it having been shown by the prosecution that he was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a witness.

The shooting occurred at 4:22 o'clock in the afternoon. Judge Lawler had a few moments before declared a ten minute recess and the jury had left the room.

The attorneys for the prosecution and defense had returned to the room for a short conference with Judge Lawler in his chambers. Mr. Heney had resumed his customary seat and was conversing with Chief Clerk McCabe, of the district attorney's office, when Haas came forward. He approached Heney and, placing a revolver against his right cheek, fired. Instantly the court room was the scene of the greatest excitement. Some bystanders seized Haas, others hastened to the relief of Heney, who was caught as he fell forward, the blood streaming from his wound.

When he was arrested, Haas said he shot Heney because he had ruined him.

In a statement made to Police Captain Duke, Haas said: "Heney denounced me in public, which ruined my life and branded me as an ex-convict. It was an outrage. I am a wronged man. I do not care what becomes of me now. I have sacrificed myself, not for my own honor, but for those who are situated like myself. By God, I would not have brought my four children into the world to hear such a brand if I had known that the fact that I was an ex-convict would become known. Heney ruined me. That is why I shot him."

RECOUNT OFF

At the Request of Findley Who Asked for the Same.

At Saturday morning's session of the county court the recount of the votes for prosecuting attorney was abandoned at the request of A. J. Findley, Democratic candidate for that office, who had asked for the recount.

When the court adjourned Friday evening, five magisterial districts, or eighteen of the thirty-eight precincts, had been counted, namely, Coal, Elk, Eagle, Sardis and Simpson districts. Both Will E. Morris and Findley had gains and losses in the recount, but up to that time Morris still had a plurality of 44, the same as before the recount began.

Mr. Findley informed the court that he reserved the right to resume the count within thirty days, but Mr. Morris demanded his certificate of election.

The expenses of the recount are to be taxed to Mr. Findley.
